Missionary Moments

Have you ever considered what it's like to be a kid at the grocery store? Mother is in a hurry and she takes the kid and stuffs him into the seat and says, "Sit there and be quiet. I've got to pick up a couple of things." Now when mother says a "couple of things" that means a couple of things from each section.

"Now, son," she says, "you can't have everything. Just sit there and be quiet. I will roll you up and down the aisles, and you can see all these wonderful things to get but you can't have anything — but I will get everything I want, and not only that, you will have to sit on what I get." To a kid, that's like sitting on Ronald MacDonald's lap and not getting a Happy Meal. Children are not happy campers in the grocery store.

While women make kids sit in the seat, men often let them run loose. Ladies: here is some advice — Don't ever leave your children with a man. He will forget about them. I read about a man who put his kid in a child seat on top of the car and drove off. When he hit about 50 he noticed something fly off. It was his kid!!! The boy landed perfectly in the middle of the road and was smiling when his dad got to him. I think God has special angels on duty when Dads are left with the children.

I heard of a guy who was with his son in the grocery store. His son kept asking him if he could be a dog. Finally, the dad said, "Fine, be a dog, just be quiet." Later he saw his son run up to a man and lick his leg. Horrified the dad ran and apologized to the man. The guy took it well and said, "I'm just glad he didn't think I was a fire hydrant."

There was a kid with a burned lip. When asked what happened, he said, "he burned it licking his night light." When asked why, he said, "he'd never licked one before." Kids like to experience everything, and at the grocery store there is so much to experience.

A lady was in a hurry to get groceries, and she put her son in the seat. As she hurried along, putting stuff in the cart, the kid spotted some chocolate chip cookies. He said, "Mom, please may I have some?" She said, "No!" About four aisles over, the kid asked if he could just have a few chocolate chip cookies. Again, she told him no. After about the sixth aisle he asked, "Mom, could I just have one chocolate chip cookie?" Again, she said no, popped him, and told him to hush or she'd have the manager put him in the big freezer.

When they got to the check-out area, the lines were long. The mother glanced down and saw a gleam in the boy's eyes. She knew something was coming, but she didn't know what. In my mind, I imagine this kid in those yellow, footie pajamas as he stands straight up in his seat, lifts his hand straight toward heaven, and in his loudest voice hollers, "In the name of Jesus, give me some chocolate chip cookies!"

I'm told the grocery store erupted in applause, so he said it again. More applause, and with everybody clapping, the mother didn't know what to do. So, she ran and got him the chocolate chip cookies.

What can we learn about life in the grocery store? As an adult, I can learn that sometimes, when I go to the store, I get things I don't need. It's kind of like life: If you live by distraction instead of direction, and don't have a list of priorities to go by, it could be that when it's time to check out, you realize you have bought a lot of things you don't need and cost a whole lot more than you thought.

It's the lesson from the little boy in the yellow footie pajamas that is really important. In a simple but powerful way, his story teaches us that when you come to the check-out of life with no resources and no hope, there is only one name that has power. The name of Jesus. The Bible says that Jesus is the only name whereby we can be saved. Make sure you know that name.
